MESSRS. BAXTER AND CLINGMAN.

We acknowledged the receipt, some time since, of Mr. Baxter's able and scathing reply to the Hon. T. L. Clingman, at a discussion in Rutherfordton. The publication of the Speech has brought on a controversy between these two gentlemen, and we are induced, to satisfy the public curiosity, to publish the respective Cards, which have appeared over their signatures.

TO THE PUBLIC.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Dec. 30th, 1850.

Through the kindness of a friend, there has been placed in my possession a scurrilous publication, professing on its title page, to be "Speech of John Baxter, in reply to the Hon. Thomas L. Clingman, at Rutherfordton, 13th November, 1850. Published for the Author at the Asheville Messenger Office, 1850."

Though the author at the outset, declares that my "public acts, and personal qualification for office," are "a legitimate subject for discussion," yet the production is characterized by so much impudence, malice, and what must be regarded as intentional falsehood, as to render it questionable, perhaps, whether I ought to take any notice of it.—What he actually did say at Rutherfordton, I replied to at the time without any rejoinder from him. If any portion of this production shall be supposed to merit reply, it may be given on my return home. His coarse attack upon the great majority of the citizens of the District, to whose favor I owe my present position, needs no reply from me. This body of freemen, constituting nearly seven-eighths of the voting population at the last Congressional election, will meet with its merited scorn such vituperation.

They, it seems, are villified, because they do not choose to sacrifice their manly independence of judgment, at the dictation of a few self constituted leaders. He seems infuriated with rage, because he cannot control the action of the people in accordance with the wishes of those persons in whose cause he is enlisted.

To him, and his opinions, I cannot be other than profoundly indifferent. Before the independent freemen of this District, I am always ready to vindicate my public acts, and defend my principles.

Very respectfully,
T. L. CLINGMAN.

From the Asheville News.

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.,
January 16, 1851.

Messrs. Atkin & Reynolds:

GENTLEMEN:—I received by this morning's mail, the News of to-day, in which I perceive you have published Mr. Clingman's Card, of the 30th ultimo.

Through the kindness of a friend, my attention was called, on Tuesday evening, to the same Card, published in the Standard of the 8th inst. I hastily wrote a suitable reply which I forwarded by Wednesday's mail, but retained no copy, and consequently cannot furnish you with the same. But as the Standard is patronized by persons not so familiar with the politics of this District, as the readers of the News, my communication to that paper was more elaborate than I design to make this; and without waiting for its appearance in the Standard, to be from thence transferred to the News, I respectfully request the publication of this.

It is only with the view to set myself right before the public, that I consent to notice Mr. Clingman's Card.

By this Card, my speech is characterized as "scurrillous, impudent, malicious, and intentionally false." These are very grave charges, and I ask you as honest men, if you will thus loan the columns of your paper for the slander and vituperation of an individual, and close them against the parties assailed? thereby cutting off the privilege of a defence or explanation. I am satisfied you will not.

Let me ask then, upon what evidence are these charges based? Solely upon my printed speech. Nothing else is pretended by Mr. Clingman. Is it not, therefore, due to me, that you publish the speech—the evidence relied upon to support the charges—that your readers may form an opinion for themselves from the evidence, whether Mr. Clingman's Card is true or false? This, sirs, is the only vindication I desire, before the people of this District to whom I am known, and I submit the justice of this proposition to your own consciences.

Mr. Clingman's allegation that I have made a "coarse attack upon the great majority of the citizens of the District," is a wilful perversion of my remarks. I have made no such attack and he knew it; but he thus makes a cowardly attempt to enlist the peo ple of this District as a party to his private quarrel by impressing them with the belief that my speech is personally offensive to them. If such is its character, its publication would undoubtedly benefit Mr. Clingman, and injure me; but, notwithstanding you are his avowed friends and supporters, no portion of it has yet found its way into your columns. If Mr. Clingmon is sincere in what he says, you will gratify us both by publishing my speech.

I have no disposition to make an issue of veracity with Mr. Clingman, because it would be disagreeable to myself and unacceptable to the public; but I will say that in imputing to me intentional falsehood, and in intimating that my published speech is not substantially the one made in reply to him at Rutherfordton, the Hon. gentleman lies. I met Mr. Clingman on three several occasions and each time made substantially the same charges against him, that are contained in my published speech; and although he denied, as just, some of the inferences drawn from the facts stated he failed to controvert any fact, except one, at Marion, and conceded that when he was informed that I could prove it. In proof of this, I appeal to the 1,000 persons who heard us—upon your own recollections, Messrs. Editors, who patiently listened to us at Asheville. If the facts relied on were not true, why did the gentleman not contradict them then? and instead of a broad denial now, why not point out the falsehoods and present me a distinct issue? I stand ready to support, by the fullest proof, every fact stated, or to withdraw them whenever I am satisfied that I have done Mr. Clingman injustice. No, sir, it suited his purposes better to seek a personal quarrel, in the hope that he would then be able to divert the public mind from his inconsistencies and ambitious designs, and avert the ridicule so justly resting upon him for his inordinate vanity. But, I beg leave to inform the Hon. gentleman, that if he expects to drive me from speaking plainly my opinion of his public acts and motives evidently prompting him thereto, by menaces and threats, and coarse denunciation, he will fail of his object.—Though a disagreeable labor, if he desires it, I will appropriate such time as I can conveniently spare from private business, to the discussion of these issues before the people of this District, and abide the result.

Yours, &c.
JNO. BAXTER.

FOR THE REGISTER.

YAWNING.

Though I make no particular pretension to the character of a philosopher, and but seldom presume to moralize—hardly for my own benefit, much less for the benefit or admonition of others; yet, the other day, after indulging in a peculiarly long and sonorous yawn, a few thoughts struck me in connection with this act, which I think, tho' springing from a barren root, may still be somewhat worthy of observation. Has any one ever considered the act of yawning, in its natural, moral, social, intellectual, political, religious, or psychological point of view? As is too often the case, the things that lie nearest to us are among the last to occupy our thoughts, and the wonders that exist even in the very essence of our being, attract the least part of our attention. Since this subject has been thus neglected—when any one at a glance may see that it affords material for an extended work in six large volumes: one on moral yawning, one on social yawning, &c. &c.—would not a few thoughts thrown out at a venture, be likely to produce the execution of this desirable work, by kindling the fire of genius in the capacious recesses of a mind fit for such things? With this hope as my only inducement, I throw out the following jejune, and ill-assorted remarks, with this prefatory deprecation, that I am well aware that they are but a specimen of an intellectual yawn, and bespeak your pitiful consideration accordingly.

Every one who has ever yawned, will at once assent to the assertion, that yawning is one of the most helplessly ludicrous situations in which poor fallen man is ever placed. Nearly all the senses obliterated—the will in abeyance, the muscles rigid, the mouth wide open, temptingly inviting to that large blue-bottle-fly but just now buzzing round your head, and whose mysterious disappearance you cannot account for when you recover from the spasm without sundry unpleasant misgivings. What, I ask, is a man fit for when he is yawning? His ears are deaf to all calls, alike of pleasure or reason. He hears not the warning voice that points out the danger in his path. His muscles no longer obey his volitions; his will and all the other faculties of his mind tumble into one undistinguishable heap, so that it would take a smart man to determine between judgment and imagination, much less between the latter and fancy.

I have seen it somewhere asserted—if I remember right in the writings of Edgar A. Poe—that "sneezing is a short method by which profound thinkers get rid of their superfluous ideas." Now as no two acts can be more incompatible than yawning and sneezing, I am inclined to think, reasoning by analogy, that yawning is an effort which a man whose brain is empty makes to catch any superfluous ideas that may be floating in the atmosphere, hoping to take them in, in the same manner as that blue-bottle aforesaid. Some, perhaps, may sneeringly insinuate, that it was thus that I obtained all my ideas by the yawn with which I started. Well, be it so—it only proves most conclusively the correctness of my theory, which may account for the exceeding volubility of some of our most sapient legislators in connexion with their apparent inanity; for, a few days ago, in a certain legislative hall not a thousand miles from here, I was so struck with the yawning of the members, that I was almost tempted to believe that I was in an Institution specially established for the promotion of that department of human action, and I felt much tempted to propose as a motto to be emblazoned in letters of gold on all the pillars of the house, the notable speech of Meg Merrilies to Domine Sampson: "Gape sinner, and swallow."

Having called attention to the almost total abeyance of all the senses in the act of yawning, and the exceedingly helpless and ludicrous condition of the individual thus suffering; the awful predicament in which a man would be, if this state were to continue a year, a week, or even a day, may be easily appreciated; but fortunately the spasm passes off almost instantaneously. But in the consideration of yawning in a moral, social, or religious point of view, we see that those who are taken with it, remain in that state for long periods of time, nay, during a whole life. Unhappy creatnres!

When I see a man apparently forgetful of the difference between meum et tuum—if a petty tradesman, constantly charging exorbitant prices, and swearing the articles cost him more than he sells them for, representing them to be what they are not; if a wholesale dealer, constantly endeavoring to fill his purse at other people's expense; and in general, when I see men dishonest, and whose only rule of right and wrong is the statute law of the land, I think to myself, that man is indulging in a moral yawn. When I see a member of the church, if not exactly sleeping on his post, at least taking no interest in the affairs of the church, and trying to remove the load of guilt from his own conscience, by falling out with his pastor; and, in general, when I see men—christian men by profession—neglecting all their religious duties, I see clearly enough, that they have been seized with a religious yawn. By the way, is not that the case with rather more than half the church in these days?—the best of them only yawning, the rest of them fast asleep! When I see a politician striving by all means, foul as well as fair, to advance himself—who would, for his own private interest, tear in fragments the glorious fabric of our now happy and prosperous Union, and give all order and law to the howling winds of anarchy and confusion, merely that he may float like the froth on the top of the wave, that political storms would raise—I fear that that man, though wide awake to his own interest, is taking a patriotic yawn. When I see a man thinking he can write, heaping words together, without rhyme or reason, filling volumes with the evidences of the fearful inanition of his own brain—I am much inclined to place him in the same category with one who subscribes himself an intellectual

YAWNER.

LETTER OF MR. GEYER.

The St. Louis Republican furnishes a telegraphic statement of the contents of a letter from Mr. GEYER, which was read in the joint session of the Missouri Legislature, in the debate of Friday, the 17th inst. As the high character of the Senator elect, and his eminent ability, give great weight alike to his statement of facts and his deductions from them, we commend so much of this letter as we copy below to the especial attention of our readers:

"The persevering efforts to procure the passage of acts to prohibit slavery in the Territories, and abolish it in the District of Columbia, have brought on a fearful crisis. At the commencement of the late session of Congress no one, I think, can doubt that the success of those efforts, in either case, would have been regarded and treated by several of the States as an open declaration of civil war; and the Union, with its manifold blessings, would have perished in a conflict of arms. Nay, if the questions had been left open to agitation another year, this Union could not have withstood the shock. Fortunately, better counsels prevailed, and the greatest of all calamities was averted by the passage of the several bills constituting what is called the Compromise; and now, my deliberate opinion is, that the best security we can have against the recurrence of the imminent peril which we have so recently escaped, is, to uphold that Adjustment in all its parts, and preserve it inviolate.

"Although the admission of California, with her extensive boundaries, and the acts for the abolition of what is called the slave trade in the District of Columbia, would not have been entirely acceptable to me, unconnected with the other constituents of the Adjustment, or a reliable assurance of th... passage; yet, as a whole, I was from the b... ginning, am now, and shall be to the end, ... favor of that Adjustment. It is the best se... tlement of the controversy that could, unde... all the circumstances, have been obtained.

"It involves no sacrifice or surrender of principle. It impairs no right of a State or citizen of the United States, and secures no triumph to any section, party, or people of the Union over another. Good faith, as well as the preservation of the harmony of the Union, requires that it should be sustained by men of all parties.

"If it can be preserved inviolate, it will restore harmony and tranquility to all portions of this Republic by re-establishing the confidence of our people in the justice of the Government, and the good faith of their fellow-citizens. If it be overthrown, no one can estimate the calamities that will almost inevitably be brought upon the country."

SENATE.

EVENING SESSION.

MONDAY, Jan. 27th.

Mr. Cameron called up the Resolution in favor of Barnabas Thomas; read and rejected.

Received a message from the House stating the passage of an Engrossed bill for the increase of the public Revenue, in which they asked the concurrence of the Senate—read 1st time and made the order of the day for to-morrow 12 o'clock.

The motion of Mr. Clarke to reconsider the vote by which the amendments to the bill relative to the R. & G. R. R. Co., were agreed t..., was lost by the vot...—ayes 20, noes 25.

The Engrossed bill relative to Pilots was read 1st time and passed.

Sundry Engrossed bills and Resolutions were read 2nd and 3rd times and orderd to be enrolled.

The Engrossed bill concerning the official Bonds of Sheriffs, Coroners and Constables was read 3rd time and rejected—ayes 9, noes 34.

The Engrossed bill to prevent the corruption of the slave population was read 2nd and 3rd times and ordered to be enrolled.

The Engrossed bill to establish a new Co. by the name of Jackson was read 2d and 3d times and passed.

Received a massage from the House stating the passage of the bill to increase the Capital Stock of the Bank of Cape Fear with sundry amendments—concurred in and the bill ordered to be enrolled.

The Senate then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

EVENING SESSION.

MONDAY, Jan. 27.

Several reports were made from the Committee on the Judiciary, and the Committee discharged for the remainder of the session.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of bills on their third reading, and the remainder of the evening session, till a late hour, was consumed in reading and discussing them. It is impossible to give even a faint sketch of the disorder, hurry, noise and confusion which reigned through the Hall, and much more difficult to tell precisely what was done.

[Such is the bustle, excitement and confusion attending the closing scenes of the Legislature, that our Reporters find it absolutely impossible to take down the Proceedings. Any thing of particular importance that may have transpired on yesterday, shall be noticed upon some subsequent occasion.]

Disagreement of the Jury in General Henderson's Case.

NEW ORLEANS, January 22.—The case of the Government vs. General Henderson, charged with participating in the Cuba invasion, was brought to a close on the 21st and given to the jury, who after being out for a considerable time, were unable to agree. They were accordingly discharged by the court. It is presumed a new trial will take place.

THE STEAMER ATLANTIC.—The steamer Arctic brings no news of the Atlantic, and the fact excites general comment and anxiety in all our circles. We do not think, however, there is any good cause for additional alarm. The New York Express, of Saturday, says:

"The Atlantic sailed on the 28th of December, and the Arctic the 11th of January, only two weeks later. There was not time therefore, to hear from the Atlantic supposing her to have put back short of coal, after being half way across the ocean. With adverse winds it would be impossible to arrive here under sail, and with favorable winds, her return to England would occupy more time than the fourteen days between the sailing of the two steamers. If she returned, as we suppose she did, we ought not to expect to hear from her for many days to come, and shall not probably even by the Canada, which was to leave on the 18th of January.

MR. HAUGHTON, OF CHATHAM.

Although the Raleigh & Gaston Road Improvement Bill was really passed by the casting vote of Mr. Speaker Edwards, to Mr. Haughton, of Chatham, is no less due the credit of having secured that important measure. Mr. H. is opposed, on principle, to releasing the obligors from their bonds to the State; but rather than see the Bill defeated, the Road utterly destroyed, and the disastrous consequences that would thereby ensue to a large portion of the State, he came forward, in the spirit of true liberality, in the time of need, and voted for a concurrence in the House amendments, thereby causing a tie, and enabling the Speaker to give the casting vote.

This statement is due to Mr, Haughton—by no means, at his solicitation, but as a voluntary expression of our own appreciation, and that of other friends of the Raleigh and Gaston Road, of his course in the particular alluded to.

THE ADJOURNMENT.

Both Houses of the General Assembly adjourned this morning, at 8 o'clock, after a tedious session of 72 days; and in a few hours a large majority of the members will be on their homeward way. We wish them, one and all, a safe return to their families and friends.

Previous to adjourning the two Houses, the thanks of each, respectively, were tendered to the Speakers, for the manner in which they had discharged their duties. To this compliment, on the part of the Senate, Speaker EDWARDS responded as follows:

GENTLEMEN:—I heartily thank you for your generous approval of my administration of the duties of the Chair. But whatever merit there may be in that administration it is rather to you than to any proficiency or skill of my own. By your constant observance of all of the rules of order, and courteous deportment in all that concerned your intercourse as Members and as Gentlemen, you rendered the task committed to me of easy performance and not without great pleasure. This might have been expected of the Senate of North Carolina, distinguished as it always has been for the urbanity of its members and their love of order and decorum.

If our common labors, Gentlemen, shall be crowned with the happy results which honest intentions and enlightened and patriotic devotion to the public interests, so signally manifest in all your deliberations, always deserve and rarely, if ever, fail to produce, we shall ever be able to recur with pride and delight, to our participation in the public service of the present Session of the General Assembly. May such, Gentlemen, be the good fortune of each and all of you, is my fervent wish.

We should have been more than men, if we had not, in the progress of our labors, been sometimes entrapped into excitement, tinctured no little by acerbity, both of feeling and remark; but as men, it can cost us no effort to regard these things as fugitive as the moment in which they had their birth, and to remember them as among the things that have been. In taking leave of each other, and returning home to mingle again with our friends and constituents, let us not forget that though widely separated, we are still brethren of the same family, and that our common household is North Carolina, the whole of North Carolina, and nothing but North Carolina—always remembering that the highest praise of the good citizen is, that he is dutiful to his country.

I bid you farewell, and pray you to take along with you, my fervent prayers for the health and happiness of each and all of you.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Speaker DOBBIN prefaced the proclamation of adjournment with the following remarks:

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS:

The time has arrived when our legislative labors must close. The hour of separation is now at hand. I have not language at command to convey to you, the grateful emotions I experience from your generous appreciation of my earnest efforts to preside over your deliberations with impartiality and integrity.

Gentlemen, I thank you—from my heart, I thank you—for this manifestation of kindness in the resolution just adopted.

This theatre on which for many weeks past we have been playing our part, is one where may well have been expected these exhibitions, ever the result of the promptings of patriotism—State pride—personal ambition, and sectional jealousy.

Permit me, gentlemen, to tender you my congratulations, that patriotism and State pride have triumphed on this occasion, and to express to you my sincere hope, and my confident expectation that your arduous and protracted labors will contribute to the honor of our beloved State, the prosperity and happiness of our common constituents. And if in moments of excitement, perso...

BLAKE'S

Patent Fire Proof Paint.

☞ This most singular substance, in a few months after applied, turns to Slate or Stone, forming a complete coat of Mail, protecting whatever is covered from the action of Fire and Weather. It has now been tested more than six years and shows that TIME and the ELEMENTS only seem to indurate or harden the substance; it seems to be a perfect desideratum for all outside painting that has for centuries been sought in vain. For all descriptions of buildings, either Brick, Wood, or roofs of Wood or Metal, there is nothing equal to it. So highly are its Fire proof qualities appreciated in Akron, Ohio, where it is best known, that all the Insurance Companies have published that they will Insure Buildings well covered with it at a much lower premium than those covered with Tin or Zinc, as it has been tried in several fires there and stood much longer than either. For Rail Road Depots Bridges, Steam boat and Car decks, for all kinds of Iron, it forms a coating nearly as hard as the Iron itself and never cleaves off.
